

PM Forum 2018 – The Project management event

Around 1.000 managers and decision makers are expected to visit Europe's most important project management congress. The 35th edition of the PM Forum will open its doors in Nuremberg on 24th and 25th October 2018.

This year's highlights include the top-class keynotes by Ranga Yogeshwar, science journalist and TV presenter, Marco Sturm, ice hockey coach of the German national team, Sven Gábor Jánosky, trend researcher as well as Svea Eckert and Dr. Andreas Dewes, investigative journalists ("Nackt im Netz" - Naked on the web).

With about 70 lectures, delivered by business experts, the congress programme will provide an overview of the entire modern project management economy and focus on important trends and issues, such as agile, lean and hybrid PM, digitalisation, DevOps and innovation projects, project portfolio management, continuous professional development of project management competencies, interpersonal skills as well as project culture and sustainability.

New, innovative formats complete the high-quality programme. A planning game day, speed gaming or circle training for project managers invite visitors to participate. In addition, there will be ten interactive workshops, which provide even more opportunities to network and share experiences within the PM community.
